After spending a decade as a retail manager, I decided to take a coding bootcamp to pursue a new career path in the tech industry. The bootcamp provided me with the skills and knowledge necessary to become a competent programmer, and I'm now eager to put these skills to use in a new role. While the transition may seem like a big leap, I believe that my years of experience as a manager have equipped me with transferable skills such as communication, problem-solving, and teamwork, which will be valuable in any workplace. I'm excited to explore the possibilities that the tech industry has to offer and eager to start my new journey as a developer.
